Poster from WWI era donated to NPS museum

An NPS assistant class scheduler and former telephone switchboard operator donated a Navy recruiting poster from the WWI era to the NPS museum recently.

Edith Phillips donated the poster that first appeared in 1917, the same year the Postgraduate Department at the Naval Academy (a forerunner to NPS) closed its doors and sent its students and faculty to the European front. When the institution resumed operation in 1919, it was renamed the Naval Postgraduate School.

Before becoming part of the quarterdeck's responsibilities, NPS's telephone switchboard was operated by Phillips and former employee Genie Montgomery.

"Genie used to collect posters as a hobby," Phillips said. "There was an article in the Mercury News in 1972 about her. Because of that article she began receiving posters from around the world. This one she kept.

For the longest time it was propped up against a file cabinet. I thought it was too cute to let fall apart and be destroyed."

The poster can be viewed in the museum Mon. to Fri. from 11-2 p.m.

NPS professor in Moscow during unsuccessful coup

The attempted ouster of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was witnessed first-hand by a prominent U.S. expert on Russian affairs.

Dr. Roman Laba, a National Security Affairs professor at NPS was in Moscow to study comparative national movements in the Soviet Union when the unsuccessful coup began. Laba, who conducted research in Poland during critical phases of that nation's transition, is scheduled to continue the field phase of his Soviet research until mid-October.

Earlier this year, Princeton University Press published Laba's book, "The Roots of Solidarity: A Political Sociology of Poland's Working Class Democratization."

Rally raises money for burn victims

With sirens screaming, lights flashing and engines roaring, NPS fire trucks along with several local area fire trucks roared to a halt outside the front entrance of Herrmann Hall around noon last Friday.

No, the old Hotel Del Monte wasn't in peril of burning down again. There wasn't even a fire.

The California Firefighter's Burn Relay, volunteers that support the Alisa Ann Ruch Calif. Burn Foundation, were conducting their sixth annual Burn Relay.

NPS firemen, along with more than 43,000 California firefighters and police officers took part in this six-day event to raise funds for burn survivors and burn prevention programs.

The relay, that began Monday, Aug. 19 in San Diego and finished Saturday, Aug. 24 in Atwater, raised $352,000 according to Glenn Samples, NPS firefighter. NPS firefighters along with other Monterey Peninsula fire departments raised $18,000 in one day - Thursday, Aug. 22.

The relay began in 1986 when Capt. Darrel Wilson of the Monrovia Fire Dept., conceived the idea as a means of raising funds for burn victims. It has grown each year since then.

Parking survey out

The NPS parking survey that began Aug. 26 was distributed to personnel who regularly work, teach or attend class at the main campus.

Everyone that received a survey is asked to return it by Sept. 5.

Surveys can be dropped into the parking survey box located at the Herrmann Hall Quarterdeck, to the Base Police Building 200, or guard mailed to Code 44.

safety notes

Using common sense

One is not born with knowledge.

The child in a highchair moves his arms and a milk cup is overturned. The child learns through repetition of don'ts, that he must look before he moves his arms.

As we grow up and leave childhood behind us, we are taught a lot of don't information, which basically can be viewed as common sense hazards. We learn that wet floors can be slippery. We learn that pipe wrenches do not always grip properly and that adjustable wrenches become loose while being used.

When we see a person committing an unsafe act such as using a file without a handle or improperly lifting an object, we know from experience that he will eventually injure himself. When he does, is this an accident or an unforeseen and unexpected happening?

When we notice a malfunction in a tool or a machine, we know that it will fail without attention. When it does fail, is this an accident or an unexpected and unforeseen event?

A worker repairs a machine, builds a piece of equipment, or is in charge of an operation that fails because of his sloppy work or inattention to the job at hand is guilty of a job failure. The worker who injures himself because of his own carelessness is guilty of job failure, too.

Over 90 percent of all injuries are caused by the worker who does not make use of the training and expertise he has picked up since he knocked the milk cup over when he was in the highchair.

If you must offer sympathy, offer it for the pain the worker is suffering, not for the job failure reasons.

the U.S. Coast Guard. In the All Navy, Corkill took second place in pistol and was first among the active duty Navy shooters.
